The success of the University’s research program depends not only on funding received from federal and other government agencies but also from private sources. Private funding is reported in two categories: Industry and Non-Profit.

Industry typically includes commercial (for-profit) entities such as pharmaceutical, energy-focused, and technology companies. Non-Profit includes foundations and trusts, such as charitable organizations established by family foundations or employees of a company, and voluntary health or disease-specific agencies. It also includes individuals, hospitals, and institutes.